I believe that the whole lawsuit was financially, politically motivated and outright unfair right from the start. It was brought into court by people who just could not compete with their own talent with Microsoft's PC operating systems. We still use Microsoft exclusively in all our PC's end user applications and probably always will.

However, if Microsoft is willing to live with the final decision they should be given the opportunity. They believe it is the best place to start over and so do I.

The only reason the opposition is not satisfied is they were hoping the courts would hand them the keys to the PC operating market.
